Open Letter from Healthcare Professionals: Release Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis

We are writing as healthcare professionals to demand the immediate release of Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis from detention at the Brooklyn Metropolitan Detention Center (MDC). Throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, New York City has released people in detention to reduce the risk of outbreaks of this life-threatening disease. Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis are two hard-working lawyers who dedicate their time advocating for their communities and who were detained for alleged property destruction at a protest in response to the murder of George Floyd. They pose no danger to society, yet the federal government insists on placing them and their futures in danger in order to demonstrate control and authority.

Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis are both lawyers who have a long-standing record of service to their communities and serve as primary caretakers for family members. Their detention harms not only them, but also the people who rely on them: Colinford cares for three young foster children and Urooj cares for her elderly mother. They have been charged with property destruction at a protest, and have no prior record of offenses. Notably, as would be expected in these circumstances, they were initially released on bail by two federal judges. After their release, the government took unusual action by appealing this decision.

Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis are now being held in Brooklyn MDC, a federal detention facility with multiple confirmed and dozens of suspected COVID-19 cases. As health care professionals, we know that holding them in this facility places them at significant risk of contracting the virus. People detained at Brooklyn MDC report that they are only allowed to shower a few days out of every week and that medical concerns do not receive prompt evaluation or treatment. Recently, a man detained at Brooklyn MDC died after being pepper sprayed in his cell, a clear example of deadly, excessive use of force within the facility.

We are also deeply concerned that Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis have been held in solitary confinement, a practice that places them at risk of severe and irreparable psychological harm. People in solitary confinement experience difficulty sleeping, changes in appetite, chronic headaches, and palpitations. Psychological harms of solitary confinement include depression, anxiety, panic attacks, and self-harm, including suicide.

Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis's unnecessary detention during a pandemic poses a significant danger to the health of other people in detention, prison employees, and the surrounding community.

Prisons are high-risk areas for outbreaks of contagious illness and are not equipped to contain the spread of this highly infectious virus. One of the essential strategies for preventing the spread of COVID-19 recommended by the CDC is social distancing. People who are in detention are frequently in shared spaces including shared dining halls, bathrooms, and showers. COVID-19 survives on surfaces and poses particular risk in these heavily utilized spaces. Other strategies for control of an infectious disease outbreak include hand washing, use of alcohol-based sanitizer, and regular cleaning of shared surfaces such as light switches, door handles, countertops. These measures often are not or cannot be implemented in detention facilities.

Therefore, it is not surprising that nationally there have been 1,346 reported cases of COVID-19 in federal detention facilities, and 87 deaths. This is likely an underestimate, as many people in detention with COVID-19 symptoms are not tested. Facility staff, vendors, and contractors all travel between the detention facility and the community and can transmit the virus from the facility to surrounding areas.

By appealing their release, the federal government chose to increase the number of people held at Brooklyn MDC, during a pandemic. In doing so they placed everyone who is held or works in the facility at greater risk of COVID-19. Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis are at greater risk detained at Brooklyn MDC than they are isolating at home.

In sum, as healthcare professionals, we care deeply about the health and well being of all New Yorkers. We have witnessed firsthand the catastrophic consequences of the administration's failures to adequately prepare for this crisis. We cannot stand by as they continue to place people in danger in the pursuit of political gain. Therefore, in consideration of the health and dignity of Urooj Rahman, Colinford Mattis, other people in detention, and the wider New York community, we demand that you immediately release Urooj Rahman and Colinford Mattis to their families.

Sincerely,
